

TRANS DAY OF REMEMBRANCE

20.11.2023

20th of November is the International Trans Day of Remembrance commemorating trans and genderdiverse people who have been murdered in the past 12 months.

We also remember and name people who have committed suicide as a result of their experience of discrimination in a trans hostile society.

We also remember people who have died because they were denied medical services because of transphobia.

We also remember trans and genderdiverse people who have died in custody or in prison.

We also remember trans and genderdiverse people, whose names and histories are not known.

On November 20th, we remember a lot of people - each with their own stories and different lives. Trans and genderdiverse people are not all affected in the same way; many are multiply marginalized and, in addition to transphobia, are affected by racism and find themselves in precarious living conditions.

However, November 20 is also a day to remember struggles, to make the names of those murdered and their stories visible, and for trans and genderdiverse people to take their grief and anger to the streets.

The names are not just a list, behind these names are people who lived, loved and fought. The list of names is incomplete, because transmissic violence is not systematically recorded in most countries. In addition, victims are often misgendered and their deaths are not perceived as transmissic-motivated act of violence.

320 trans and genderdiverse people were killed in the period between the first October 2022 and September 30th 2023. These are only the officially reported numbers.

We added 5 names to the list of the TransMurderMonitoring (TMM).

94% of all trans and genderdiverse people whose murder has been recorded are trans women or transfeminine people.

45% of all trans and genderdiverse people murdered that have been recorded in Europe are migrants and or are migrantized.

Particularly affected by transmissic violence are trans women and transfeminine people, sex workers, and people who are also affected by racism.

Trans and genderdiverse sex workers face violence, exclusion, harassment and discrimination worldwide. The situation is exacerbated by criminalization policies and laws.

we remember - we resist
